To get to the station I step into a public omnibus passing my dwelling, without saying a word. Has this stepping-in any legal consequence--and what? 2. Would stepping into the carriage of a friend, who is taking me for a drive, have also legal consequences? What is the distinction between the two cases? 3. What position in a legal view does the conductor of the omnibus in the above case occupy? Does the Omnibus Company incur liability merely in respect of the contract I have made with the conductor? Or also for his delicts--for example, where he has appropriated a travelling-bag forgotten by me or deliberately given me too little change? 4. Also, where he has done the latter unwittingly? 5. Is the legal position of the driver the same as that of the conductor? Or is there a...

Reviews

This publication may be really worth a go through, and a lot better than other. It really is written in simple terms and never difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
