Paper, 41 pp. Robert Clarke Company, publishers, Cincinnati, O. I HIS book is written from the standpoint of an eminently practical Idealism, and from the ground that the perception of the soul is the basis of freedom, and thence of all true culture. The key-note of the book is Love--the love of God, the love of man, the love of Nature; but this is Religion, and thus is it a plea for all that is true and vital in religion: religion not for set times and set places, but for all days and all times--the religion of Love. A free and rugged spirit pervades the book; it radiates health, for it was written in the open air and constantly suggests the woods and fields. It has force and originality and grace of style: a sound and wholesome book, full of love and good sense. Above all, it is serene and hopeful, and from beginning to end is suggestive of Peace. It is an antidote for the fever and unrest of the times, and carries the reader to the unexplored recesses of his own being and sets him to vibrating with the Real. It should be the aim of every earnest book to act in some degree, however slight, as a medium for impersonal Truth; and herein lies its use, should it attain to the dignity of usefulness, that it shall arouse some dormant faculty, shall animate our latent perception of the Immanent...
